Line Marking

Within hours of a call from our client, OUTCO were able to mobilise our Southern team to complete line marking works at the NHS Nightingale Hospital, Birmingham.

The lines create the emergency parking bays for the ambulances bringing critical patients to the new 500-bed hospital at entrance to the National Exhibition Centre.

The hospital, fully operational in just two days, will initially hold 496 beds divided into four wards, with the potential to be immediately increased to 800 if needed.

The hospital can also be massively scaled up in phases if infection rates worsen across the region, with a second phase of up to 2,000 beds and a worst-case third phase, up to 4,000 beds and OUTCO are on hand to assist at every stage should we be required.

OUTCO have asked CBRE to donate the funds for this project to the NHS Charity.
